PREPARE TO CELEBRATE.

THE ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED, IT NOW REMAINS WITH THE PEOPLE.

General Portion of the Centennial Program Given Out—Opening Salute of Cannon to the Tune Langue Recorded—Interruption of Locomotives in the United States—What Crowds to Confidence—Yesterday Parades—Special Church Services.

The arrangements for the universal celebration are now complete, the committee in charge has devoted much work not only for the last time at the Union League committee rooms, but also at the Auditorium, where Grand's new room was the probable site to be used for the greatest concentration ever seen in Chicago. On Sunday will be heard a million simple, sincere hymns of praise for the wonderful existence of life in similar degree to our forefathers for the blessings of a country to receive upon the rising generation and the citizens of foreign birth, for re-consecration of the flag and the heavens, as to design to a continued defense to that possibility and preservation we keep to the Centennial Spirit, and finally to thank for the opportunity to register their honored Fourth of July style with hands and footsteps.

The day will be ushered into four periods. First, the religious services, at which all the people will offer thanksgiving; second, the great patriotic celebration; third, the innumerable meetings of the afternoon; fourth, the spectacular displays of the evening.

Promptly at 6 this is the celebration will be begun by the booming of cannon, a salute of thirteen guns—one for each of the original States—will be fired from Sheridan's Park, on the lake front, by Gen. Dick Sommers. This will be followed by the ringing of all bells in the city for half an hour—a grand organ accompaniment to the Love of Liberty. All of the churches will also ring out a welcome to the day, and from hundreds of factories will be heard the whistles.

[illegible] will be held in the Auditorium, with Gen. Miles presiding. The Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus will be the principal speaker. Other addresses will be made by Mayor Harrison, Governor Yates, Gen. Miles, Gen. Wheeler, Gen. Young, Gen. Chaffee, Gen. Brooke, Gen. Bates, Gen. Corbin, Gen. Ludington, Gen. Grosvenor, Gen. Dick Sommers, Gen. Wood, Gen. Shafter, Gen. Merritt, Gen. Otis, Gen. Lawton, Gen. Gillespie, Gen. Hains, Gen. Ruger, Gen. Greely, Gen. Howard, Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, Gen. Joseph Wheeler, Gen. Wade, Gen. Gilmore

The Tribune.

PUBLISHED APRIL 28, 1889.

The election between the last Cook County and the City Railway Company is ended, and seems to have been nothing more important than "a moment in a tempest." The carriage companies do know the number of the cabs that are, starting to make a start on a public competitive tour of the countries. The company formed for over that and does what the Tribune, and also interested that the whole matter is no secret to the office of the Executive of Cook County. The fault is on the men who did not know where to look for the material knowledge, and it may be claimed for them that they are not obliged to specify the records in such cases.

The number of immigrants arriving in the United States during the last week exceeds by 50 per cent the number for the corresponding week of last year. The increase is principally from the Scandinavian countries, Germany, and Great Britain sending the last week a thousand or 15,000 each. The latter item is a big one, and it is to be hoped that it is correct. Of late years the tide of immigration has been largely composed of Italians, who have usually furnished nearly full steerage-fare for their start, and to get to the coalpit with this money, but the 5,000 men from Italy may perhaps be set down to the account of Italy's charities. It is probable, however, that the increase will be in some other mode by this spring to the not recently prosperous ones to make extraordinary efforts to get away from the West.

Many years ago, while the old Constitution was in force, and special legislation was to go to glory, a corporation wishing to secure the passage of a bill which gave to some exceptional privilege went one of its best employés to Springfield to see that it was put through. He lived on starvation there for one of the fiercest and keenest county-seat struggle against bills not that would splendor to corporations. But there were two things the members, the opposition of one was a person matter and not any of the lawful-plan was could not be opened. He has fully got used to this, and we rest not to him, "I see you are opposing our bill. I am sorry for it that, but it cannot be helped. But there is one thing why you should not, as a lawyer, I suppose a member from us, and make a legal engagement for the all time to come to us in the future. That concerns you in nothing. It simply makes an impression. What will your fee be for that?" The opposing member gave the matter. "I don't think there is any thing I can do for you," he said after a moment's reflection. "I have already been retained by the other side, and I don't feel like throwing up my case." "Oh, that's all right," was the reply. "I'll see that you are all right. I'll make it worth your while to throw up your case." And he did. The bill was passed, and the lawyer got his fee.

The election of Gen. Fred Grant and Brooklyn will have this year the largest consecutive holiday they have ever known in the quiet and orderly manner. The New York contestants, however, undoubtedly great performances both Monday and Wednesday. Hence, to avoid broken short noise which were falling the street that time, the Legislature passed through a bill making the day of April and 1st of May legal holidays thereon. There, then, this year for the consecutive days, Monday being included, there will be little or no business done in the greatest city of the continent, and those who depend upon its stock market for their recreation will have to get their amusements elsewhere. Those New Orleans who have to move on the 1st are not yet clear to avoid as to how they will manage it. Probably by a sort of general exodus for 24 hrs soon to close.

Some of the men who are always on the lookout for cases of any danger have noticed last week by the information that any attempt was experienced in Great Britain. They intend ... and to the conclusion that the world-area of that country is assured to drouth. The fact is, England suffers suffers from a lack of moisture. Lying in the track of the Gulf stream and Arctic breath are exposed to an intermittent rush to which the narrow of the part of the north are strangers. The atmosphere in the spring seems to be loaded with moisture that is too true even passed into a present that "it gets off Earth that is worth a drop's ransom." The saying has been quoted here in other quarters of the heritage our climatic conditions are opposite to those to us to, perhaps regret. Rain in March is necessary rain as good for the crops, and the showers and which caused a poor start at the following harvest time. In England the reverse is the case. The crops there fail through too much moisture, never from the lack of it. There is no lightning-rod for a long season on account of a fire any weather in the United Kingdom at this time of the year.

The question has been raised whether the appointment of Gen. U. S. Grant to a seat in the Cabinet under the Constitution would make it necessary for him to resign his seat in the Senate from the State. There are many to receive such seat it would be a matter of little consequence, but as he is a holder-to become one of some political importance. The Constitution says: "No person holding any office under the United States or this State shall have a seat in the General Assembly." On several previous occasions persons holding places in the Cabinet have been elected to the Legislature, and the Postmaster has always acted them for their resignations before they entered on their legislative duties. The question now to be decided is whether that is now the necessary or merely polite. To determine that it is proper to see what constitutes an "office" in the view of the Constitution. That says, quite many: "An office is a public position created by the Constitution or law." Is then a clerkship in the Post-Office, which is created neither by the Constitution nor by statute, but by the order of the Postmaster-General, an "office" in the strictness of the Constitution? If so, then a stenography in the Secretary's, or County Clerk's, or Collector's office is an "office." It has been customary, in a loose way of speaking, to call such positions "offices," but they are not so according to the definition of the Constitution.

PAY BOTH FEBRUARY ELECTION BILLS

The Senate has passed the Crawford bill to certify primary elections. The House is now more than the necessary number of votes has passed the Hayes bill, which has the same purpose. The House should be accommodating and pass the Senate measure, for though, during local contest, should pass the Hayes bill. Then both will be on the statute books, and if Mr. Crawford's case does not work the other can be tried.

The great difference between the two measures is that one tightens the responsibility of office; the other does not do that. Mr. Crawford's project, while containing some excellent salutary provisions, such as limiting votes to registered voters and making clerks properly accountable, yet leaves the responsibility free to act as it will. The inevitably of the unscrupulous, when placed upon his honor to fulfill a trust, is a tolerable well-known fact, and the law of averages would be against the success of the Crawford bill. The Hayes bill, on the contrary, while not perfect, is a step in the right direction. It fixes responsibility, and, by making it a felony to violate the law, it places the offender in the hands of the police. Under the Crawford bill the police would have no power to act. The Hayes bill provides that when a petition is filed to hold an election of any party which is to hold it may apply to the Election Commissioners and ask them to take charge of the election in the ward for which said petition. Upon any one of many grounds, such as the petitioners may ask, the Commissioners may, after hearing the case, decide that the petition is well taken, and thereupon they must appoint judges and clerks to conduct the election. Then the Commissioners must see that the judges and clerks do their duties, and not as they do on a regular election, and are liable to the same penalties if they fail of their duty. They exercise the same offices as the same Judges and Clerks would in the November election. The Commissioners must see that the ballots are properly counted, and that the result is duly certified. The Hayes bill is a step in the right direction, and it is to be hoped that it will be passed

Bach

The following named gentlemen are now connected with this house and would be pleased to have their many friends pay them a visit:

Louis Stahl, George W. Stauffer, Col. Lindley, H. H. Newberger, Thomas J. Dungey, Jas. P. O'Brien, Sam J. Snyder, Fred J. Peiler, Elmer Behrents, Albert Foster, J. B. Valentine, Frank S. Reynolds, William Easterly, George Beller, Richard McDonald, Carl Bierbaum, H. H. Leppel, John Cunningham, Arthur Foster, A. E. Gilligan, Wm. Schmidt, Jas. Wilkinson, Ben H. Kaufman.

Several of the above salesmen are familiar figures around these parts, having been on these corners many years.

Residents and visitors to our city will find the doors of our mammoth and magnificent establishment wide open to receive them. Our army of affable and courteous salesmen will give them a cordial and hearty welcome.

THE TWO CELEBRATIONS

Washington's Centennial. Bach's Inaugural Opening.

LET THE BELLS RING! LET THE BATON WAVE!
LET THE CURTAIN BE RAISED AND THE FESTIVITIES GO ON!

Nine years ago the building on the southeast corner of Madison and Halsted sts. was opened by the U. S. Clothing Co. Since then time has worked many changes. Modern civilization has advanced; Presidents, Governors, and Mayors have come and gone; battles have been fought; Sporting's athletes have been to the four quarters of the globe; gigantic enterprises and undertakings have been developed in our midst. Chicago, the most beautiful city in America, with its palatial and magnificent structures, its handsome drives, its public-spirited citizens, has increased in population nearly one-half million. Chicago, the city by the lake, America's greatest railroad center, with its enterprising citizens, will keep on in the even tenor of their way, and, like Cæsar, being ambitious, will make it THE GARDEN CITY OF THE WORLD. The West Side has had its share of improvements, but the most gigantic transformation that has taken place in these many years has just been consummated on the southeast corner Madison and Halsted. BACH, who has been identified with the Clothing Trade on the West Side for the past five years, by a stroke of enterprise Feb. 16 bought out the entire stock of the old U. S. Clothing Co. at about 67 cents on the dollar. Having made up our minds not to keep a dollar's worth of the old stock, we put knife in same, and we are proud to say that on WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, at 9 a. m., our doors will be thrown open to the public WITH AN ENTIRE NEW ASSORTMENT of Men's, Boys', and Children's Clothing and Hats and Caps, the like of which, as regards beauty, style, make, and finish, has NEVER BEEN SHOWN BEFORE IN THIS CITY. Our store will be profusely decorated with choice cut flowers and rare exotics. PROF. REMENYOTOS FULL ORCHESTRA WILL BE IN ATTENDANCE. Each lady and gentleman will be the recipient of a handsome souvenir. Each child accompanied by its parents will be presented with a box of delicious French Candy.

LIFE-SIZE WAX FIGURES OF THESE CELEBRITIES
CAN BE SEEN IN THE OPENING DISPLAY WINDOW OF

BACH, AMERICA'S CHAMPION CLOTHIER.

Our Men's and Youths' Depts.

Are filled to overflowing with the choicest products of the world's looms. Many of the designs have been confined to us. When viewing the immensity of our Spring Stock, the exquisite taste displayed in selection of same, and the low prices at which they've been marked, well may we state you as our customers. It's the price that's catch you. Never in the annals of the Clothing Trade have good, reliable goods been sold at the prices we name. Our Special One-Day Sales will be kept up, devoting one day to each week in giving the public a chance to get acquainted with our mode of doing business. Being up to the times, we will inflict new ills into the old system, which for many years on Opening Days prevailed. We show in Suits, Overcoats, and Trousers such a diversity of colors, styles, and makes that the most fastidious can be pleased at a glance.

As Shakespeare Says:

"TAKEN AT THE FLOOD LEADS ON TO FORTUNE"

Knowing without doubt the southeast corner of Madison and Halsted is the best clothing centre in the city, BACH had the carpenters, painters, plasterers, decorators, and electricians at work for the past eight weeks remodeling and beautifying the old landmark. The extensive alterations we are compelled, having taken out three walls, replacing same with the handsomest French plate display windows, necessitate, moreover the building adjoining, formerly occupied by Sears, the druggist, which shall be used as an exclusive boys' and Children's Department. To the honest men of toil who have worked so faithfully we say: "Well done, thou good and faithful servants."

Our Juvenile Department

Is a perfect palace of taste and elegance. Such an array of Boys' and Children's Suits, such a comprehensive and complete assortment of caps, Hats and Jerseys, Shirt Waists, and other furnishings for your little ones are to be found in no other house. When in want of anything in this line you'll find it to your advantage to call here. In this department the little ones are all always presented with candy and refreshments.

OUR HAT AND CAP DEPT. is a new feature. We have built a new addition, and now, boy or child can find a varied and extensive assortment of headgear of whatever style desired.

OUR FURNISHING GOODS DEPT. is replete with all the latest styles in Underwear, Hosiery, Ties, Gloves and Cuffs, Handkerchiefs, Suspenders, Shirts, Collars and Cuffs, and other articles sold by first-class furnishers.

THE STORE WILL BE CLOSED

On our Opening Day until 2 p. m.

Two Grand Concerts, 3 to 6 p. m., 7 to 10 p. m., on Our Opening Day

And Concerts Every Evening thereafter until July 4. Remington's Full Orchestra.

NO GOODS SOLD ON OUR OPENING DAY.
HANDSOME SOUVENIRS FOR ALL.

Our facilities for handling large lines of goods, together with our mode of doing business—buying and selling STRICTLY FOR CASH—enable us to offer at all times special designs at prices that are unapproachable.

We have a laudable ambition in view—namely, selling at all times the HIGHEST STANDARD OF GOODS FOR THE LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICE.

It being decreed by the unwritten laws of fashion that novelties must be produced at all risks, those whose unfortunate duty it is to conceive these are apparently reckless as to what they produce as long as it is new.

Here is where one's vivid imagination comes into play.

One must have an eye to the beautiful, originate striking and effective designs—goods that are unique, and well made, and shapely.

We are proud to say on our Opening Day our new and commodious quarters will contain all that is novel and be justly called a veritable

PROF. BARNARD IS DEAD.

THE LATE PRESIDENT OF COLUMBIA COLLEGE HAS PASSED AWAY.

An Attack of Pneumonia the Cause of His Demise—Dies in Harlem, a Well-Nigh Chicago Person and Successor of Alexander Hamilton—Dies Peacefully, Who Came to Duty in 1861—Born in Connecticut, on Old Guinea to Alma—Other Deaths.

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—The Rev. Frederick Augustus Porter Barnard, D. D., LL. D., L. H. D., one of the most accomplished of American scholars and late President of Columbia College, died at his residence, No. 37 East Forty-ninth street, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. He had been ill for some time previous to the completion of the Centennial of the colonial last May, and seemed to succeed in throwing off the severe grippe. His condition was, however, greatly improved. The pneumonia came on shortly after, and, in spite of every effort, the venerable President sank peacefully away. The funeral will probably take place on Wednesday afternoon, from the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, corner of Forty-fourth street and Madison avenue. The interment will be at Sing Sing.

Dr. Barnard was born in Sheffield, Conn., in 1809, being a descendant of Peter Barnard, who came to this country from England in 1639. He graduated from Yale College in 1828, and was appointed professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in the University of Alabama in 1837. He remained there until 1854, when he began the establishment of normalism and training institutions. In April, 1855, he became actively engaged in the Literary Fund and Common School system of that State, and was appointed one of the original Superintendents of Common Schools. He continued in the service of the State for two years, and then returned to the North. He became a writer and lecturer on educational topics, and was chosen President of Columbia College in 1861, which position he occupied until his death. He was married in 1837 to Miss Jane Shepard, of Middletown, Conn., who survives him, with two children, Frederick A. P. Barnard, Jr., and Miss Sarah B. Barnard. Dr. Barnard was a member of several prominent societies, both literary and scientific, in this country and abroad, and was the author of many valuable works.

Dr. Gilmour officiating. Interment Graceland.

The Salt Lake Tribune of last week to hand contains great reviews, Dupont and Stanley, but no one seems to be the least excited over the matter. It has been the business of the Tribune for some months to denounce Stanley and Dupont as a couple of fakirs, and it has kept up the fight with a vigor that is worthy of a better cause. The Tribune believes that Stanley is a fraud, and it has said so in every issue. Stanley and Dupont pretend to be men of God. They have had a fight, the result of which is that Stanley has been driven from the city. The Tribune believes that Stanley is a fraud, and it has said so in every issue. SOCIETY BRACING UP FOR RELEASE FROM LENTEN PENANCE.

The Metropolitan Opera Season Extended for Chicago Fashionables to Leave Previous—A Week of Brilliant Weddings and Receptions—Rules of the Young People Who Will Merrily Wind Themselves in Maypole Ropes—Other Society Events to Note.

After six weeks of at least partial retirement society has once again started in on a round of gayety and self-indulgence, and for the next three weeks there will be a season of entertainments for those fortunate enough to be invited. Of course after the weddings, of which there have been plenty, the opera has been the chief attraction, and society has subjected itself to appreciation of Wagner and the music by attending to the limit each night. Even the general public, who is known to back a true and long-suffering friend of great merit, has decidedly cast its fortune in Grau's, and is responding after the usual fashion of the public—being at first slow to appreciate and then overdoing matters by attending night after night without a reason. The last performance, of necessity somewhat spoiled, was complete this season at every event performance, and pretty young women in evening dress have given an added attraction to the house.

[illegible] the biggest affair of the week was the musical Wednesday evening of Miss Lucy B. Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Evans, and Mr. Frederic Ogden Wells, of Syracuse, N. Y. The ceremony occurred at 7 o'clock at Trinity Episcopal church, Michigan avenue and Twenty-sixth street, which was handsomely and tastefully decorated for the occasion. Upon that side from and [illegible] were placed on the altar and the chancel and aisles were banked with palms and flower vines. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, the ushers being Mr. John Evans, brother of the bride, of Evanston; Mr. Charles Ogden, of Syracuse, N. Y., Mr. J. Vaux Jr., Mr. Clarence Carter, Mr. Arthur Curtis Jr., and Mr. Benjamin B. Lamb. The bridesmaids were Miss Elsie of Evanston, Miss Jessie Jeffery, Miss Nellie Hoyne, Miss Mary Hoyne, all of Evanston, Miss Bessie Ogden, Miss Ada Ogden, and Miss Virginia Hoyne, the latter being the maid of honor. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Charles Evans Jr., and was met at the altar by the groom, who was attended by his brother, Mr. Benjamin Wells, of Syracuse. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Clinton Locke, rector of Trinity church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Edwin Hall, rector of Grace church, New York. The bride's dress was of white satin, with court train, and was trimmed with duchesse lace and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, 3,000 invitations having been issued. The house was handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal party received the guests in the parlor. The bride's mother wore a gown of white satin and lace, and the groom's mother was attired in a handsome costume of [illegible] satin and lace. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left on the evening train for Syracuse, where they will reside.

The wedding of C. C. Lawrence Jr. and Miss Florence Hubbard, the accident which befell the bridegroom's father preventing the marriage from taking place on the day originally set, was solemnized at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2,000 Michigan avenue. The house was handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal party received the guests in the parlor. The bride's mother wore a gown of white satin and lace, and the groom's mother was attired in a handsome costume of [illegible] satin and lace. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left on the evening train for Syracuse, where they will reside.

The marriage of George B. Lawson to Miss Emma E. Hubbard took place at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2,000 Michigan avenue. The house was handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal party received the guests in the parlor. The bride's mother wore a gown of white satin and lace, and the groom's mother was attired in a handsome costume of [illegible] satin and lace. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left on the evening train for Syracuse, where they will reside.

The last [illegible] of the season's Club was given on Friday evening at Bowen Hall, Fifty-first street and Grand boulevard. The hall was handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal party received the guests in the parlor. The bride's mother wore a gown of white satin and lace, and the groom's mother was attired in a handsome costume of [illegible] satin and lace. Mr. and Mrs. Wells left on the evening train for Syracuse, where they will reside.

The marriage of Miss Jessie Jeffery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Jeffery, to Mr. Charles Evans Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans, of Evanston, will take place on Wednesday evening, May 1, at 8 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2,000 Michigan avenue. The house will be handsomely decorated with palms and flowers, and the bridal party will receive the guests in the parlor. The bride's mother will wear a gown of white satin and lace, and the groom's mother will be attired in a handsome costume of [illegible] satin and lace. Mr. and Mrs. Wells will leave on the evening train for Syracuse, where they will reside.

"'Tis beauty truly blent."
Shakespeare.

What a wealth of beauty lies hidden in the heart of a tree. Occasionally one is found which, when skillfully cut and properly polished, reveals a graceful figure and rhythmic wave, with a soft blending of colors that appeals to the purest æsthetic taste.

The artisan's chisel cannot improve its excellence save by an occasional spray, as a single pink or rose might add to a woman's beauty. To secure woods of this kind and work them into Household Furniture, leaving upon them "the stamp of nature," as far as may be, is "realism" in the art of cabinet-making. This we have tried to do, and the result of our endeavors may be seen in various articles of cabinet ware displayed on our fourth floor, which is devoted to High-Class Furniture of our own design and make.

WHAT ARE THE FINE ARTS

CONTRIBUTIONS OF CHARLES KLEIN AND OTHER GREEK ARTISTS.

The Pink Paint with the Writer's Definition of the Long and Chaste of Discussions in Support of Its Use. Some Hats, by Success of the Cadet Architect in a Classy Line of Recent Italian Sketches—The Fine and the Beautiful Together Wrought Out.

In a recent number of the Penn Charter Dial Burton favored us with a paper on the fine arts. Entering the lists lately and supposing the senior writer chose to enter the ring, a definition of the Fine arts." Mr. Burton has been at close quarters on this group of arts, and knows that as much has been said as every man "sensible" can have grown tired of the subject." To us may with the assertion, but Burton proposes a clear reply to the question: What is art? After pleasantly deny and protesting out a few following points are offered: "The fine arts are arts of expression to us some adequate or beautiful form. If we accept this definition as perfectly correct a large departure follows. To consider merely girls women recognize that speech, sounds, and gestures are an adjuncts of the fine arts."

To one who does the entire article offered unstinting praise—the author has used even the subject a much later as he expected to, let but even not hasty indigent phrase. There is a wonderful element of truth that contains which serves to the power of reason, clearly or instinct. There are so many subjects and the temperaments and prove that one must take a definition of an fine arts which has a form of repetitive motion.

It is singular the famous writer made no mention of the opening of art to general, and the question of the world gets, however a wonderful study of the keep to keep up with people would have thrived on the support of the keep to the highest needs. A growing love among common temperaments and drawing of that form, or subsequent, against people. However that we get good thereby, I will always remain to the end what I was at the beginning—an art.

An art is attributed as to a theory to artists. The art, therefore, is the study of something which has in the most an art idea, for imagination, which that concern of a beautiful form, but that could succeed to artist only study to the express to mention of upon earth the connection. No one would deny members of a square book of those, but the sequence that one makes a square book to the artist. Does art to a sweet rose of another nature than daughter for that the carpenter has sense to perfect wife or the work a true test of a true sense that fear to do artist talent, but to not take rule of artist an sculptor to a great extent. Why? Because the carpenter's work is done to the sense of utility, while the sculptor's work is done to the sense of beauty. The fine arts go therefore beautiful another straighten. We do not mean to say that the artist does not improve his theory to a form, from forms may be a poetic, a drama, upon novels, to architecture, or a organ, or to sculpture or paint, a vase, a beautiful to an book, a work to find art on was the stories of Burns, because find art to daughter of beauty are into form.

Carl Darnes says: "The word 'fine' as comes before the exception that the expression should not be more elements the correctness to be most perfect artistic form." That sentence discusses the fact that the letter sequence had most 'fine' or not to the quality of the surrounding, because to relate wrong to the fact of beauty an distinguished from simple utility. If a draftsman should make to the most perfect expressive form" a wealth affected or a street car track the expression of disgust would not be 'fine,' because that term implies an aesthetic expression but on an utilitarian expression of beauty. A 'fine art' is, therefore, beautiful thought wrought out into form.

The fine arts take nine embraced three: architecture, sculpture, and painting; but in our own touch that the position which some think they were master of each has other forms of the art, and not by the art of fancy descendants the beautiful forms to produce, as silver, gold, and glass using of the great value of beautiful sculpture worked out. Some talented pencil and music, to be made fine arts by the fact that they are beautiful sounds, thoughts, and sentiments. Beautiful are the tone. Carl Barnes's picture of a fan art means to Easter's book of geometry to be learned because there Euclid has no ground to taught. "A sad has attended form" but geometry and surveying are not landscape enough most perfectly to present beauty literature to the sort of forget that outdoor ornament or beauty—the term "fine" meaning entirely for ornament.

Sculpture, painting and architecture are beauty sought out for the art, poetry and music are beauty sense into form for the ear or eye. There are eight beautiful senses. Time are ready to be brought to give service of relations to each other. But Easter's mind must discover pleasing perceptions; the mind express them. Miner's mind could happen upon useful contentment for most common time to a daring form. Wise music Miss Easterbrook's ear likes to forge an ornament to her art as that which came from a mouth or Pan as.

It seems to be a game of a fan art each line of poetry must be brought out just as the ear and the finger of a painter must be so complete to taste and art, and Easter to. If the term is had of the sixth collector that term or finger must come from "fine art" and must admit a kind of pregnancy of expression.

In Mr. Longfellow's "Psalm of Life" there is one line rich in a perfect struggle to all the forests. It should have been long made an exercise. It reads in this manner:

Trust no future, howe'er pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead;
Act—act in the living Present,
Heart within and God o'erhead.

The second line appears on the change not by reason of an ear to movement of the lines, and while the word is may say "Trust to the Bible," he are no exception to method that over to the poetry. The stress is rested by the word "Act."

It is a wonder that the musician and poetic lover of Hans Sax not back from the Parnassian hill to quote Scripture when the Psalms of the Bible are of the most beautiful way. Their method has art and was fitted by the holy words to exalt truth by their commission from the very hands, and have a most solemn and inspiring effect. Even as patriotic words, "Although you are the center by," and such like, "As the poet's to Dr. Longfellow's successful poem, "Excelsior" there are not those words to be fine arts by the fact that they are beautiful sounds, thoughts, and sentiments. Beautiful are the tone. Carl Barnes's picture of a fan art means to Easter's book of geometry to be learned because there Euclid has no ground to taught. "A sad has attended form" but geometry and surveying are not landscape enough most perfectly to present, because

BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCES ON THE LAKE SHORE AND THEIR OWNERS.

The Improved Portion of the Boulevard That Will Be Completed to Promontory to Greatly Shorten the Distance Between Fashionable Residences Between Chicago and Hyde Park—Some Views of the Palaces and Conversation with a Description of Different Parts.

The project of extending the North Shore drive to Washington university many added interest to that portion of the most pretentious country residences, embracing, in some cases, a frontage of three hundred feet, a depth of one hundred and eighty feet, and a square foot that property has cost from the owner of the house. It is true that the improved portion, that which lies between the village limits and Hyde Park, is, as yet, but sparsely built upon, but enough has been done to lead society to make it the favorite drive of the future. It will be one of the most beautiful pleasure resorts in the city, if, indeed, it does not divide it with the South Side. Going along the drive southward from Lincoln Park a glimpse of four houses is found on the right, the residence of C. L. Hutchinson, the first of which, being on the corner of Lincoln Park, is reached. Mr. Hutchinson's handsome home stands far back from the drive, and is surrounded by a large lawn, which is separated from the drive by a low iron fence. The house is a three-story and basement brick structure, with a frontage of about seventy-five feet and a depth of about one hundred and fifty feet. The style of architecture is Queen Anne, and the building is surmounted by a tower, which gives it a very pleasing appearance. The interior finish is in keeping with the exterior, and is very handsome. The grounds are tastefully laid out, and the whole property is one of the most attractive on the drive.

Interesting Details of His Life in Virginia—In War a Man of Wealth—Hospitable Features of His Long Visit—His Old Age Spent With, but Not Ruled by Martha Washington—The Old Home That Was Dropped When He Died.

Fairfax (Va.) Letter to the Baltimore American: In the state's office at Richmond there is preserved the original will of George Washington as he wrote it the last year of the 18th century. It is quite a lengthy document, covering twenty-one pages of ordinary size, and the solicitor seems to have had the whole matter in charge. At the beginning of the last century, when the executive books were printed on the plainest kind of old Fairfax foolscap, the county authorities sent the will to Richmond and executed it with the formality of the Commonwealth. In addition to the engrossing of that city by the Confederates the will has also suffered at the hands of the public, and when the Executive of U. S. Grant, a prominent citizen of Fairfax, was sent to Richmond to recover it, he received it from Dr. Leroy, the actual keeper, who stated that it had been found in the office among the papers and trash that had been scattered by Federal officers on the first day of one of the battles. But for the accidental discovery it would have been destroyed as of no value. It is now preserved in a safe box with a glass top and kept in a fireproof safe, though the spot has recently been, Mr. J. W. Richardson, to-day said, to which to close this book as far as they cannot touch the passengers, however, as the car is locked, and the key, like the key to the vault at Mount Vernon, has never left the President, the custom house officers apparently not having the temerity because of the responsible indorsement of engaging to clear off goods to preserve its value. Washington took the precaution to go his name at the bottom of every page except the second, but the signature to the last page is the only one that is "Washington" in the entire document. The other pages are signed "Geo. Washington," and the first page "Geo. Washington, Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States the twenty-fourth year of the Independence of the United States of America." There is an air of quaintness about the will that strikes it 100, and the most unique after the most

"wills."

Though a great deal has been said about Washington's early occupation and moderate circumstances in middlehood, he enjoyed enough wealth to follow the French fashion of the time and have a number of slaves to wait upon him. He was himself fond of his personal comfort and appearance, and his advertisements before the revolution in the "gaz. Gazette" for the return of property which he imagined had strayed or been stolen from him show that he was in the habit of wearing fine clothes. In one instance he offers $50 more in the French crown pistoles than the value of the property, and in another $10 for the return of a pair of "Mohair Garters." He was also fond of fine horses, and a number of advertisements in the Virginia papers describe animals which had strayed from his stables. Washington's estate at this period, however, was not large, and he was frequently in debt. He was a good manager, and his habits were simple, and he was not extravagant. He was fond of hunting, and in the fall of the year, when the fox hounds were in full cry, he would be found in the saddle, and he was a bold rider. He was also fond of fishing, and in the spring of the year, when the shad were running, he would be found at the fishery on the Potomac, which belonged to him, and which is still in the possession of his descendants.

Washington was a man of large physical proportions, and in his younger days was remarkably active and athletic. He was a good wrestler, and was accustomed to throw the bar for a considerable distance. He was also a good runner, and was frequently matched against the fleetest of the young men of the country. He was also a good boxer, and was considered a match for any man in the country. He was also a good swimmer, and was frequently seen in the water. He was also a good rider, and was frequently seen on horseback. He was also a good shot, and was frequently seen with a gun in his hand. He was also a good fisherman, and was frequently seen with a fishing rod in his hand. He was also a good hunter, and was frequently seen with a hunting knife in his hand. A Poetic and Sudden but Not Superficial Flight of a Man.

Walt Whitman has a peculiar, and, considering everything, an I may say, not inappropriate, to his humble cottage home, upon a picturesque by-street of Camden, N. But here are "Good Gray Poet" has lived ever since he left Washington in 1873, after his five attacks of paralysis. The seven months Walt has been within the walls, living on his bed or seated in an invalid's chair and endeavoring that an entirely unconcern to the sun, of the unseemly world, to the extent this gracious and gentle lady said: "He suspects," quietly, under the authority, of the "Invasion Knights," for that

ON THE FIELD OF HONOR.

A SHOTGUN DUEL WITH BULLETS AT FORTY YARDS APART.

The Rev. Joseph H. Ingraham and Dr. S. H. Cobbs Settle for a Shot—A Meeting That Might Have Been Fatal—Statements Made to the Field Lapsed Seats with Bullet, Buckshot, and Entire Magazine Fruit—A Few of the Participants.

San Francisco (Special): Two more men have settled misunderstandings on the shotgun basis of life. One seems to have succeeded but little better than a Kentucky duel, in which the parties are placed a hundred yards apart and seem to have keep, the guide to the action of the pieces. Then each and with each and after many shots they are thrown aside unexpectedly and some-times had come to have the duel to a finish with the last shot. The duels had clearing fifteen rods of some meetings, perhaps, and seconds are said to be of less efficiency, even brought to an account of the great and strength that the combats for blood to quieting him.

Something like fifty years ago two young men, one a lawyer and the other a doctor, lived not many miles from the town of Grand Gulf, Miss. Both could not have had settled quite the efficient law. That is to refer to fight for law. It was to be a duel to the death. There was no insult to be accepted by a challenge of honors, or duty or a compromise to be urged out by a few drops of blood. The fault of one was treasured by the other. The future quit a way to be effected differently. The arrangements for a meeting were complete. The principals were armed with rifles, revolvers, and bowie knives. They had been conducted to the centre-tion of their duke down to the entrance of their arm. The rifles were to be discharged first at twenty paces, if either combatant was killed duly, were to proceed forty more revolvers at will, and if they did then be again due to be continued with the bowie.

It was early morning when the party of four men, principals and seconds, left the to the area of an island and sought a place a few miles distant. An effort at secrecy had been made, and places at four and miles, somewhere in the remotest edge of the bottom, and places at four and miles, somewhere in the remotest edge of the bottom, and places at four and miles, somewhere in the remotest edge of the bottom

THE GREAT TETRALOGY.

WAGNER'S MUSIC-DRAMAS THE STORY OF THE RING IN ARTISTIC DRESS.

Where the Spirit of the Past Free of the Old School of Modern Operatic Work Presented in Chicago for the First Time—Extract of the Performance—Wagnerian Master Notes—An Article on the Author of the Poems.

The great musical event of the last week has been the first complete production in Chicago of Wagner's wonderful "The Ring of the Nibelungen"—that is, complete insofar as the four dramas have proved to proper sequence, though every operatic devotee is interested in discussing the relative merits of the five various performances there are to be, an opinion from the standpoint of an unprejudiced observer of the performances is to be acceptable. It is the conviction of the writer, with the exception of the prologue, to be sung to-night, will easily a criticism, which not only would not exist after it, the average operatic audience to this country would enter into the spirit of Wagner's work to such an extent as to render that in this form of art such criticism would also be considered by the contingent dramatic authority, much less a singer of no pretensions. It is the difference of Bayreuth, where the theaters do not open from the season of a day, and the audience, and to a degree even that to have of art and relaxation than further addition as to the case with many who attend these performances. It Bayreuth the audiences have temporarily put aside cares for time, and for pleasure has attempted a part of real of essentials from the ordinary and business existence of everyday life. In case, those who gathered there eight years ago, as the Tannhäuser were no stranger to the Wagnerian art to enjoy to Bayreuth's reputation as to where to find both an "ideal" a thing not of obvious operatic interest today and yesterday. Hence important feature of the Bayreuth performances is not that the performances begin several hours earlier and there is an intermission of two hours between the acts, allowing time for rest and refreshment.

Bayreuth, moreover, is devoted to Wagner's music and nothing else. Its opera season lasts only a month, and for that month the whole attention of the musical world is centered in the performances. Under such conditions it is not to be wondered at that the singers, the conductor, the orchestra and the stage management should be at their best. Bayreuth is a village, and the only entertainment to be had there is that afforded by the theater. Hence the singers, the conductor, the orchestra and the stage management have no other interests to distract their attention from the work in hand.
